- SUSAN MUDAMBI
Academic Director for the Fox Executive DBA and Professor of Marketing and Supply Chain Management
Energize and advance the practice of business through applied theory. With the Fox Executive DBA, you learn to engage in high-quality research that has an impact on your industry—and the business world at large.

CONNECT THEORY TO PRACTICE

FOUNDATIONAL COURSEWORK
Develop the ability to conduct research through courses that examine qualitative and quantitative research methods, the philosophy of science, and foundational business theory. Learn how to frame your research and communicate it to a broad, interdisciplinary audience.

RESEARCH PROJECTS
Put your coursework to practice within your own research topic through four hands-on projects with direct supervision from a faculty mentor during the first two years of the program. Your research topic should address a business issue of strategic importance to your own organization or industry, which will allow you to contribute to your field’s body of knowledge, as well as establish the groundwork for your dissertation proposal.

DISSERTATION PROPOSAL AND DEFENSE
Pursue your personalized research agenda as you complete your dissertation during the third year of the program. You’ll continue working one-on-one with your faculty mentor to develop your dissertation proposal during the fall, then defend your dissertation in the spring semester. Your dissertation will apply what you’ve learned throughout the program and—once successfully defended—generate solutions that will power your professional future.
IMPACT YOUR CAREER—WITHOUT DISRUPTING IT

Benefit from the advantages of face-to-face learning while maintaining your professional priorities through the Fox Executive DBA’s residency format.

RESIDENCIES
The Fox Executive DBA is delivered in person with six weekend-long residencies held in downtown Philadelphia. Networking receptions are held every residency to provide opportunities for interacting with peers, faculty, and research mentors.

VIRTUAL COLLABORATION SESSIONS
Stay engaged with faculty and peers between residencies with live web conferencing sessions. These online learning sessions are designed to reinforce course concepts, prepare you for the next residency, and keep you connected with your peers.

Through one-on-one meetings, personalized course guidance, and hands-on research training, your faculty mentor will help you prepare to successfully defend your dissertation.

PARTNERSHIPS WITH IMPACT

Diane Denny & Professor Sunil Wattal

As vice president of quality, patient safety, and clinical outcomes at the Cancer Treatment Centers of America, Diane Denny develops and directs various processes for achieving continuous quality improvement across the network’s five hospitals and outpatient centers. In partnership with Professor Sunil Wattal, Denny’s research explored reporting errors in the medical field, examining factors such as cultural influences and organizational dynamics that result in underreporting.

CLOSE-KNIT CONNECTIONS TO POWER YOUR RESEARCH

“Diane’s dissertation on medical error reporting in healthcare settings was a natural progression of her more than 20 years of experience in quality. She identified a unique problem that had direct implications for not only her role overseeing quality, patient safety, and clinical outcomes, but also for her industry.”
